

CoE CASI Mission Statement Development

Ideas on CASI purpose from Committee Survey

- To understand and to advocate for the interests of College of Engineering academic and university staff with College and UW leadership
- To represent all staff and to raise their interests to the leadership in our college.
- To represent the interests of CoE staff working with College leadership to create a workplace where employees are heard and given the tools to be successful.
- To uplift and advocate on behalf of all staff within CoE, and to work collaboratively towards positive change.
- The College of Engineering Committee Advocating for Staff Interests (CASI) is a shared governance body of elected representatives, who serve and advocate for the interests of faculty and staff by advising the College of Engineering dean and leadership on new and existing college level policy and procedures in compliance with policies and procedures at the campus level.
- We are a group of Engineering employees working together to advocate for our staff and their issues in an honest and transparent way.
